Conclusions

Slide 1:

An interactive interface is provided, where you can select a movie from the list using Search, and find out the year of its release, genre, critics' evaluation and collected budget. Lists of the best and worst films rated by critics and audiences are also provided.

Slide 2:

The top 20 highest-grossing films are presented. We can see that the first three films are not among the favorites of viewers and critics. This is clearly shown by the other two graphs, where the work "The Century of the Self", which won the audience's sympathy, did not make a full circulation. What we can also see from the graph, where the ratio of critics and circulation was evaluated. The first top five films combined scored less than sixth-placed Gravity.

Slide 3:

The popularity of films and genres is evaluated according to the number of votes cast by the audience. Here is a graph showing the popularity of genres by year from 2000 to 2017 inclusive. Arguably the most popular action genre of all time has always garnered, if not the most sympathy, it has always remained in the middle. As for the least popular genre, it has always been military movies. The second graph shows the most popular movies by measure, with The Dark Knight being the most popular of the year.
